

THE BENEFITS OF SMILING

Cosmetic dentistry is no longer the reserve of the Hollywood filmstar, and for good reason. Research shows that smiling often increases self-esteem, literally improving one's mental state and increasing life expectancy.

In fact, research by The British Dental Health Foundation proved that having a healthy smile gives the same level of stimulation as eating 2,000 chocolate bars - not recommended if you want good teeth! The results were found after researchers measured brain and heart activity in volunteers as they were shown pictures of smiling people and asked to eat chocolate.

Dr Nigel Carter, chief executive of the Foundation, pointed out, "We have long been drawing attention to the fact that smiling increases happiness both in yourself and those around you, so it is good to receive the backing of this scientific research... A healthy smile can improve your confidence, help you make friends and help you to succeed in your career..."

"I smile much more now and I'm more confident. People look at my teeth for the right reasons now." "My dentist referred me to Moor Park. My teeth weren't terrible but some were worn and I had a partial denture; it clipped in and food got underneath - it was horrible.

To get rid of the denture and to have fixed teeth I had 7 implants placed, gum surgery and then every tooth restored with all-ceramic restorations. It took 18 months and was quite involved but I am very pleased with the result; my teeth look great.

Now my teeth look and feel like real teeth. They have a very natural shape and colour; they are white but not too white. You see people on the telly and you can tell they've have had their teeth done, but Stephen and Joe worked hard to give me the most natural smile possible. I smile much more now and I am more confident; people look at my teeth for the right reasons not the wrong reasons, Stephen and Joe have made me feel like a VIP. My cousin's husband is a dentist and he said my teeth were awful before but now when I see him he always says, "I don't think your teeth are good... they're fantastic!"
